3 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

CBS NEWSMAN MORLEY SAFER DEAD AT AGE 84; RETIRED DAYS AGO

Television journalist Morley Safer, who made his reputation as a Vietnam War correspondent for CBS and then became a mainstay on the network's "60 Minutes" show for 46 years, died at age 84 on Thursday, a few days after his retirement, the network announced. Safer, whom CBS said was in "declining health," died at his home in Manhattan. The long-running news show had paid tribute to his work Sunday. In a final posting on Twitter on Sunday Safer wrote, "It's been a wonderful run, and I want to thank the millions of people who have been loyal to our @60Minutes broadcast. Thank you!" REUTERS

SENATORS INTRODUCE BILL TO BLOCK EXPANSION OF FBI HACKING

2 A small group of bipartisan senators introduced a bill Thursday that would block a pending judicial rule change allowing U.S. judges to issue search warrants for remote access to computers in any jurisdiction, even overseas, arguing the change would expand the FBI's hacking authority. The one-page legislation from Oregon Democrat Ron Wyden and Kentucky Republican Rand Paul would undo the change to procedural rules governing the court system adopted by the Supreme Court in a private vote last month, without congressional involvement. Montana Republican Steve Daines and Democrats Tammy Baldwin of Wisconsin and Jon Tester of Montana are co-sponsoring the Stopping Mass Hacking bill. Magistrate judges can order searches only within their courts' jurisdiction, typically limited to a few counties. REUTERS

MOTORISTS ON MEMORIAL DAY HOLIDAY TO HIT NEAR-RECORD NUMBERS

3 The number of Americans traveling by car for the Memorial Day holiday will hit an 11-year high this year, fueled by a growing economy and low gasoline prices, the nation's largest motorists' advocacy group said Thursday. AAA projected 33.9 million people will hit the road and drive 50 miles or more from home during the Memorial Day holiday period, the most since 37.3 million in 2005. The expectation for strong driving numbers is welcome news for U.S. refiners, who are banking on the summer driving season to resurrect profits that plummeted during the recent fall and winter seasons.

Music extravaganza PorchFest returns to Somerville Saturday

Walk the streets of Somerville and take in the early summer sounds.

Whatever your musical persuasion is, you'll find it at Porchfest in Somerville this weekend.

"The depth and breadth of PorchFest is pretty amazing. You can get rock and you can get country, you can get classical, you can get a Tibetan folk band," said Heather Balchunas, office manager for the Somerville Arts Council. "There is really, truly something for everybody."

Once again, the city is inviting its eclectic mix of performers to take the stage — er, porch — for its massive outdoor music festival. The fun starts Saturday at 12 p.m. and runs through 6 p.m.

Overwhelmed by the dozens and dozens of options? PorchFest's website has an interactive map and a tool that lets you filter the performances down to the ones most appealing to you.

"You can really kind of customize your tour," Balchunas said.

Or you can just wander around and listen for what catches your attention at the endless musical buffet of jam sessions, HONK! veterans and that guy who plays the theremin.

The festival over the past few years has become one of the most popular events of the year in Somerville, and others in Massachusetts have followed the 'Ville's lead.

Jamaica Plain now has a PorchFest of its own (July 9).

New additions this year are Brookline (June 4) and Arlington (June 11).

"It's really nice that there's been kind of this cross-pollination within the music community and getting people involved in a really kind of special way," Balchunas said.

"The depth and breadth of PorchFest is pretty amazing. You can get rock and you can get country, you can get classical, you can get a Tibetan folk band."

Boston tourism chief arrested, indicted on extortion charges

Kenneth Brissette pleaded not guilty on Thursday to charges he illegally pressured a music festival to hire union workers.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU and SPENCER BUELL
spencer.buell@metro.us

Police arrested Boston's tourism chief Thursday morning following a federal grand jury's indictment of him for "union-related extortion."

Kenneth Brissette, 52 — who works as Mayor Marty Walsh's director of tourism, sports and entertainment — is accused by federal investigators of extorting a music festival production company in 2014, withholding permits required to hold the event until organizers hired union laborers.

Federal prosecutors allege Brissette "and at least one other city official, repeatedly advised the company that it would need to hire members of Local 11 [International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees] to work at the music festival," according to a statement from U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz.

"As a result of Brissette's demands," the statement continues, "three days before the music festival the company entered into a contract with Local 11 for eight additional laborers and one foreman. Shortly thereafter, the city of Boston issued the necessary permits."

Brissette pleaded not guilty in federal court Thursday. A judge released him on a $25,000 unsecured bond and ordered that he not leave the country and not contact witnesses. He is on paid leave.

The festival was not named in the indictment, but federal investigators have been probing Brissette's dealings with the biannual festival Boston Calling.

A spokesman for Boston Calling declined to comment on Thursday.

Brissette earlier in the day released a statement calling his indictment "factually and legally flawed," and said, "I intend to fight these false charges with everything at my disposal."

Brissette and Walsh DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

Walsh on Thursday released a statement saying he was "deeply concerned" about Brissette's arrest and called his tourism czar "a good and hardworking person."

Walsh told reporters Thursday he did not condone the activities alleged in the indictment and insisted he never told Brissette to withhold permits.

"I represent all the people of the city of Boston, whether they are union or nonunion," Walsh said.

Thursday's indictment also cites Brissette's dealings with a reality television show — which it did not name — that had planned to film in Boston.

It alleges he "was involved in pressuring a nonunion production company … to hire union workers."

Previously, investigators probed a 2014 "Top Chef" shoot in the city. Five teamsters were indicted on charges they illegally harassed and pressured the show's production company to hire union help. They have pleaded not guilty.

A city-commissioned investigation — which differs from the indictment in its findings — did not find evidence Brissette committed a crime when he warned a pair of restaurants about the union's plan to picket the production.

Brissette's extortion charge carries a sentence of up to 20 years in prison, Ortiz's office said. Actual sentences are typically less severe. His next court date is July 12.

It's Bike to Work Day in Boston, so get on the road

Ditch the car, put that CharlieCard away and pump some air in your tires.

That's because Friday, May 20 is Bike to Work Day.

It's a celebration right in the middle of National Bike Month and Bay State Bike Week that calls on everyone who can to commute to work in the bike lane.

"We think it's important to celebrate everyone who rides in Boston, and we want to make it easier for new riders to start commuting," Boston Bikes, the city-sponsored cycling initiative, said in a statement.

The city planned to host a big early-morning get-together at City Hall Plaza from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. with some music and a free breakfast.

The riders had been encouraged to join one of a dozen "convoys" from around Greater Boston, then converge at City Hall.

"The city of Boston is pleased to be celebrating National Bike Month and Bay State Bike Week with the tens of thousands of people in the greater Boston area who bicycle as a mode of transportation, for exercise, or just for fun," said Chris Osgood, city of Boston chief of streets. "Boston offers miles of off-road bike paths and on-street bike lanes, over a hundred Hubway bike-share stations, and other amenities to help people ride bikes to their destinations, near and far, safely and conveniently."

GETTING HOME IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN WHERE YOU'RE GOING

Every time you step into a taxi or limousine you place your personal safety, possibly even your life, into the hands of an absolute stranger.

While the overwhelming majority of taxi or ride-share economy trips take you safely to your destination, police reports show that every year hundreds and possibly thousands of Americans and tourists are robbed, assaulted, raped and even murdered by the drivers whose vehicles they entered without a moment's hesitation.

Until now there was little one could do if the driver took a passenger to a desolate part of of town and pointed a weapon—or worse. Now in less than 90 seconds before you enter the taxi or other for-hire vehicle:

- Safe Ride sends photos of the driver and license no. to your contacts
- These friends and relatives are pre-programmed into your Safety Profile and receive this data via text or email
- Every part of your drive is tracked in real time, and an 'arrived safely' message is sent to your contacts if you make it— and a panic alert is sent if you don't.

State police's first electronics-sniffing canine starts work

Winnie PROVIDED

The first Massachusetts State Police dog trained to detect electronic storage devices showed her skills Thursday at state police headquarters.

Winnie, a 2-year-old yellow Labrador, can detect electronics such as USB drives, hard drives, SD cards and DVDs, the police told the Boston Globe.

Electronic-storage detection dogs, or "computer dogs," can locate computer-related items and cell phones by sniffing out two different chemical compounds often found in such devices, the Framingham Source reported.

"We are very proud to welcome Winnie to our ranks," State Police spokesman David Procopio told the press.

Trooper Christopher MacDonald took a five-week training course with Winnie operated by the Connecticut State Police, and the duo graduated in March, WCVB reported. MacDonald will be Winnie's handler.

Winnie's unique skills could be used to investigate computer equipment related to suspected child pornographers or in cases where individuals have made Internet threats.

The state police announced on Twitter that Winnie is one of only seven dogs in the country certified to sniff out chemical compounds in electronics.

Boston police arrest teen with gun at playground

Authorities made two arrests at a Boston playground Wednesday, taking a 16-year-old into custody for firearm possession and arresting his 25-year-old acquaintance for allegedly causing a scene during the incident.

Shortly before 6 p.m. Wednesday, officers on patrol near a playground at the corner of San Juan and West Newton streets observed two men break away from a larger group that was congregating, police reported. The officers saw that one of the individuals kept grabbing at his waist, as if checking for a gun.

The officers approached the men to speak with them, authorities added. During a routine pat frisk for safety, an officer felt that the 16-year-old had a firearm, and he was placed under arrest.

As officers made the arrest, the other man became belligerent, according to police. He was yelling at the officers and causing a large crowd to gather in the street.

After warning him several times to quit his disturbance, police took 25-year-old Mwase H. Potts of Boston into custody and charged him with disorderly conduct, officials added. JASON NUCKOLLS

EgyptAir jet missing after midair plunge

Egyptian aviation minister said a terrorist attack was more likely than a technical failure.

An Egyptair Airbus GETTY IMAGES

GRAPHIC BY BILLY BECERRA, METRO

An EgyptAir jet carrying 66 passengers and crew from Paris to Cairo disappeared from radar over the Mediterranean on Thursday in what Egypt said could have been a terrorist attack.

The Egyptian civil aviation ministry initially said Greek authorities had found "floating material" and life jackets likely to be from the plane, an Airbus A320. Greek defense sources told Reuters the material was discovered in the sea 230 miles south of the island of Crete.

However, late on Thursday EgyptAir Vice President Ahmed Adel told CNN that the wreckage had not been found.

"We stand corrected on finding the wreckage because what we identified is not a part of our plane. So the search and rescue is still going on," Adel said.

Egyptian President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi ordered the civil aviation ministry, the army's search and rescue center, the navy, and the air force to take all necessary measures to locate debris from the aircraft.

In a statement issued by his office, Sisi also ordered an investigative committee formed by the civil aviation ministry to immediately start investigating the causes of the plane's disappearance.

Egyptian Prime Minister Sherif Ismail said it was too early to rule out any explanation for the crash, including an attack like the one blamed for bringing down a Russian airliner over Egypt's Sinai Peninsula last year. The country's aviation minister said a terrorist attack was more likely than a technical failure.

Officials from multiple U.S. agencies told Reuters that a U.S. review of satellite imagery so far had not produced any signs of an explosion aboard the EgyptAir flight.

The U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss intelligence matters, said the conclusion was the result of a preliminary examination of imagery and cautioned against media reports suggesting the United States believed a bomb was responsible for the crash.

They said the United States has not ruled out any possible causes for the crash, including mechanical failure, terrorism or a deliberate act by the pilot or crew.

Greece had deployed aircraft and a frigate to search for the missing plane. Egypt said it would lead the investigation and France would participate. Paris said three investigators would arrive in Egypt on Thursday evening.

In Washington, President Barack Obama received a briefing on the disappearance from his adviser for homeland security and counter-terrorism, the White House said. A White House spokesman said it was too early to know the cause of the crash and offered condolences.

Greek Defense Minister Panos Kammenos said the Airbus swerved 90 degrees to the left, spun through 360 degrees to the right and plunged from 37,000 feet to 15,000 before vanishing from Greek radar screens. REUTERS

WHAT TRUMP'S OPPONENTS DON'T GET

THE FOREMAN OPINION

TOM FOREMAN

If you listen to the most ardent critics of Donald Trump, they describe him like a raging monster from an old Japanese movie: rising to pulverize the political establishment, eviscerate the electoral process and decimate the institutions of power — all while mainstream politicos run screaming through the streets.

And if you listen to his fans, um, you'll hear the same thing.

I believe this is why the efforts to stop Trump's march on the White House have so far proven impotent. His foes have not yet realized that the way they are attacking is making him stronger, not weaker. Just like one of those movie menaces, he is absorbing every missile aimed at him and turning it into energy for his rampaging campaign.

How is he pulling this off? How has a new poll emerged showing him not merely rising against Hillary Clinton but potentially beating her in the general election? Certainly the answers seem to be eluding most experienced political analysts. After all, a great many candidates have been wiped out for far fewer flip-flops, questionable statements and apparent stumbles. Trump's command of facts is often shaky. His policies can seem flimsy to fantastical.

But his core appeal, like Barack Obama's hope and change in 2008, is not built on specifics. It is constructed around the simple premise that D.C. treats the American people with contempt and serves them poorly; that "politics as usual" promises nothing more than a continuation of gridlock and childish legislative tantrums. So whenever he is disparaged as someone who doesn't understand how government works, his fans effectively shout back "But government does not work, that's why we want Trump!"

Put even more simply: When protesters shout that his speeches should not be heard, when pundits paint him as a buffoon, when tweeters chortle about his hair and newspapers scream he must be stopped — it all reinforces the idea that Trump threatens the existence of all the political elites, power brokers and insiders.

And yeah, that does not hurt him. Indeed, his fans — like Godzilla wading into Tokyo — are eating it up.

Hillary Clinton says Donald Trump unqualified to be president

Democratic presidential frontrunner Hillary Clinton said on Thursday Republican candidate Donald Trump is unqualified to be president of the United States.

Ryan Gosling finally gets to be funny

A serious actor goes goofball as a bumbling private investigator in "The Nice Guys."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

"Just take a nap through the interview if you want. I won't judge you," Ryan Gosling deadpans.

It's 8:30 on a Friday night after a long week when the actor calls from Los Angeles. We're supposed to talk "The Nice Guys," a comedic thriller by Shane Black: the architect of the action comedy, who wrote "Lethal Weapon," "The Last Boy Scout" and "Kiss Kiss Bang Bang." It's a chance for Gosling, a serious actor with a strange sense of humor, to cut loose, even do slapstick.

Quickly, his goofy side is activated. "Just turn on your recorder and I'll do a version of 'End of the Road' by Boyz II Men, all four parts at the same time." And so begins our chat.

You get to do a lot of physical comedy here. You've done it before but most of your back catalog is comprised of serious dramas.

I dabbled in it in kids' television. I did a show called "Breaker High" where they could have cared less what we did. So we tried to squeeze in a lot of physical comedy. I grew up on that stuff. Slapstick and broad comedies have always been some of my favorite films. But it just didn't seem like [comedies] were in the cards for me. When this came up, I read it as a huge opportunity for physical comedy.

GETTY IMAGES

One scene has you repeatedly kicking a bathroom door while you're on the can and fumbling with a gun and a lit cigarette. That was semi-improvised?

Yeah, and I didn't know how Russell [Crowe] was going to react to it. As far as I knew he thought this was a relatively straight noir with some funny twists and turns. I was working on the stall gag and I thought I was alone. Then I smelled smoke, and I saw Russell was watching me. It was terrifying, but then he said, "If you kick with the other foot it will bounce back further." Immediately we started having the most serious conversation about the dumbest thing ever. Then I knew things were going to be OK.

Was the part where you do your best Lou Costello gasp after seeing a dead body something you came up with?

That was more, "It's 4 in the morning and it's 10 below zero and you're trying to figure out how to handle seeing a dead body for the first time." I grew up on Abbott and Costello, and it's rare to get an opportunity to nod to that. That, and I was just really trying to keep myself awake. And they kept it in.

Some of your dramas have you doing funny bits. The American flag band-aid you wear on your lip in "Half-Nelson" is a goofy touch.

Even in dramas I always try and sneak in jokes. I don't know why, but most people don't want to allow chances for humor. It's not realistic for things to always be completely serious. Sometimes humor can make things more impactful in a dramatic way. It can distract you and disarm you so you can feel more deeply about what's happening dramatically. Most of that stuff gets cut out because it doesn't feel like it's serious. With this I was surprised, when I saw the final cut, that Shane had left so much of that stuff in.

In a drama, comedy helps to humanize the scenes.

But here it's also funny. It goes back to Shane Black's [script for] "Monster Squad," where they kick Wolfman in the nards. It's just funny. It shouldn't be, but it's funny.

One last question: How long did it take for you to ditch your facial hair here?

I kept trying to shave it but it kept growing back. It was relentless. Facial hair, it just won't relent.

Facial hair is terrible. Being a man is the worst.

Hashtag.

'The Angry Birds Movie'

Director: Clay Kaytis, Fergal Reilly

Jason Sudeikis headlines "The Angry Birds Movie." ROVIO

A fun, madly chaotic movie (Tim Burton's "Mars Attacks!") has been made from a series of old trading cards — why can't the same happen to the world's most downloaded app? The bar is set perilously low for "Angry Birds," and it could get a pass for doing not one or two but three, maybe four better. There are jokes crammed into every corner — but ye gods, those gags. The humor tends to be groaning aviary or porcine puns, like a store named "Calvin Swine," a poster for Kevin Bacon in "Ham-let" or our lead whining, "Pluck my life"? (You know, for the kids!)

Generically watchable but almost never inspired, "Angry Birds" has so little to it it can't even be joke-read as a risible if accidental political allegory about the fear of immigrants. To wit: "Angry Birds" concerns a peaceful, suburbanized island of flightless creatures who are one day greeted by green pig foreigners. Their leader (voiced by Bill Hader) bewitches the denizens with his refined graces and cool gifts. But only a batch of birds with diagnosed anger-management issues know their real angle: to blow up their land and make off with their eggs.

This is divining far, far more out of a film with no agenda and no deeper thought than getting, very eventually, to the main attraction: birds catapulted into structures and dynamite boxes and easily popped nemeses. The climax has its share of kinetic destruction, though the massacre is short-lived and it takes so long to get there it could even be mistaken for any off-brand toon. "Angry Birds" is better than it ever had to be, but then again, it's a movie based on an app. MATT PRIGGE

"The Nice Guys"

Director: Shane Black

Rating: R

The mystery yarn in "The Nice Guys" may be only worth half-following, as they so often are in detective fiction. But every second demands your attention. It's a brightly colored confection crammed with goodies. In an era of sloppy blockbusters that settle for stuff and clang, it's a meticulous entertainment with a serious case of OCD.

Russell Crowe is all low growls and doughy shambling about as Jackson Healy, an "enforcer" who winds up mired in a convoluted missing-person case involving politicians, snappily-dressed hitmen and the then-thriving Detroit auto industry. So does doofus P.I. Holland March (Ryan Gosling).

"The Nice Guys" isn't about much at all beyond how clever Black — the architect of the buddy-action comedy, with his script for "Lethal Weapon" — is as a writer. At least he lives up to the hype, delivering a profane masterpiece jam-packed with sour one-liners and tight, playful construction. Even when the script is simply trying to get to the next narrative sign post, it does so creatively, even loopily. And the sacred text is jazzily interpreted by his two leads, particularly Gosling, finally fully activating his full-on goofy side, complete with regular girl shrieks. Like "Mad Max: Fury Road," it's an old pro showing the newbies how it's done. MP

"Neighbors 2" has at least two good reasons to exist. For one, it allows Seth Rogen, Rose Byrne and Zac Efron to, well, do another "Neighbors." That's a good enough excuse as is the second: The nemeses this time are house of girls, led by Chloe Grace Moretz's Shelby. They don't want to just make some noise; they want to escape four years of frat parties stocked with guys who wear shirts that read "No Means Yes." They don't want to be kicked out, but if they stay they may ruin their next-door neighbors' lives.

It's a catch-22, with both sides alternately sympathetic and juvenile. It's also progressive. But if all "Neighbors 2" was well-meaning it might have eventually proved tiresome. But it knows to be hilarious while being angry. Think piece-y points arrive as gags and there are lots and lots of dildo jokes, one of them deployed by Kelsey Grammer.

Actually, "Neighbors 2" has a third raison d'etre: It's a healthy reminder that Efron is a national treasure ... in these two "Neighbors" films. Gone is the smirking confidence of the first; his ex-fratbo spends the majority of "2" crestfallen, whimpering about his friends' successes. It's hard not to feel bad for Efron, an actor of limited powers — just as it's hard not to find his sorrow a source of hilarity. Make a third one for him. MP

Kristen Schaal on the 100th episode of 'Bob's Burgers'

The actress dishes on Louise as an adult and how people don't go out for beers in L.A.

JENNIFER LOGUE

jennifer.logue@metro.us

When asked what "the burger of the day should be," Kristen Schaal responds with a giggle, "I didn't get my puns ready for this interview! Maybe a bottom out burger?" Being that it's close to lunchtime, the actress, who voices the character Louise on the hit show, "Bob's Burgers," which celebrates its 100th episode this Sunday, is admittedly hungry, and confessed plans to grab a falafel sandwich, not a burger, afterward. Before she chows down, we chatted with Schaal about where she finds inspiration for Louise, the show's continued success and what's next.

Kristen Schaal is the voice of Louise on "Bob's Burgers." PROVIDED

Let's go way back. Tell us about when you first got the gig to play Louise.
Loren Bouchard was making a pilot presentation for Fox and he'd been workshopping it over the years and wanted to work with people he knew. He knew John Roberts, Jon Benjamin and Eugene Mirman. And then he had other people that were recommended who ran through the same circles — like me. Workshopping it with my friends — we didn't know it would become a comedy show. I never thought I'd be talking to you right now about our 100th episode. (Laughs)

It must be so surreal. Are you a big fan of the show yourself?
I am so proud of it. I have three shows saved up on my DVR. I feel like it's one of those shows where people say, "Oh I love 'Bob's Burgers'" and I say, "Me too!" I'm incredibly proud. It sets a marker of what a show should be.

Where do you pull inspiration for Louise's character?
Louise has developed as a piece of my personality. It's fun to not have a filter and say whatever comes into your head. My childhood self comes out a little and I put a hipness on top of that. She's a hip, smart kid, so it's a fun combination to play with. She's definitely a version of me.

Anything in particular you can relate to with her?
She's definitely braver than I was. I was always afraid of authority, unlike Louise. But I also looked up to my older brother, which Louise does with her older brother and sister. When you're a kid, you just go with whatever impulse you have. You can't mask it. Like she can't help but slap Boo Boo. (Laughs)

What has been the most epic moment for Louise so far?
When Logan took her hat. That was a very big episode for her.

We've never seen Louise without her hat. We got to see how serious she is without wearing that hat everyday.

Where do you see her 10 years from now?
In 10 years, she'll be 19, so I guess she'll be in college. Whatever she does, it will be a job where she can manipulate people or things. (Laughs)

Do you get a lot of creative freedom on the show?
Yes! We record together in a room in L.A. and the cast members in New York get together and call in. They want us to play with each other and improvise off one another just to push jokes further and find moments you wouldn't figure out in your head when writing it.

What's it like recording lines in a group as opposed to solo?
It's fun. It takes a little bit longer than if we were recording solo. And when I don't see [the other cast members], I miss them. It's nice.

Do you guys hang out after work?
We do! In New York we used to always get beers after, but in L.A., things are different. Nobody gets beers here. (Laughs) I think people just go back to work. It doesn't feel like a job to me, either. People will ask, "Are you working this week?" And I'm like, "No." But then they're like, "But don't you have a table read for 'Bob'?"

The 100th episode of "Bob's Burgers" airs this Sunday, May 22 on FOX at 9:30 p.m.

Louise is known for her trademark bunny ear hat on "Bob's Burgers.". PROVIDED

SOX NOW IN NEED OF A NO. 2 PITCHER IN THE ROTATION

@dannypicard

I've got good news, and I've got bad news.

Let's get the bad news out of the way first. While Eduardo Rodriguez was expected to return to the Red Sox rotation by the end of this month, the 23-year-old lefty has suffered another setback.

Rodriguez has been dealing with a right knee injury since the beginning of spring training. On the road to full recovery, he was scheduled to make his fifth rehab start for Triple-A Pawtucket this week. That is no longer the plan after Rodriguez recently admitted to having some pain in that same knee.

Combined with the news that reliever Carson Smith could possibly be placed back on the DL with the same forearm/elbow injury he suffered in spring training, the Red Sox have some serious decisions to make.

OK, now for the good news. If there's anyone who you should want making those decisions, it's president of baseball operations Dave Dombrowski.

We've already gone over the fact that he has the intestinal fortitude to make the bold moves. You don't have to look any further than the blockbuster trade for closer Craig Kimbrel and the signing of their ace David Price.

But even after those additions this past winter, there was still an incomplete feeling. There was something missing.

It wasn't the offense. Entering this weekend's series against Cleveland, the Red Sox have scored the most runs in all of Major League Baseball with 240. Six of their everyday starters are hitting at least .300. Heck, who would have thought that, in the middle of May, Jackie Bradley Jr. would be hitting .338 with seven home runs and an OPS of .997?

I was never concerned about the Red Sox' offense entering the season. But this? This group is relentless. And I truly believe the sample size is large enough where it cannot be considered a fluke.

So the decisions Dombrowski will have to make between now and the nonwaiver trade deadline on Aug. 1 will undoubtedly have to do with the pitching staff. And more specifically, the starting rotation.

Over the last month-and-a-half, I've told you about Rodriguez' potential to be a stud. He's a power arm who can dial it up to the mid-90s and get you swinging and missing his hard changeup that equals the fastball velocity of some highly-touted young pitchers in the organization. When healthy, he can be the team's No. 2 starter. No question about it.

But now that we don't know when he'll be healthy, a hole is left in the Red Sox' rotation. And I'm not asking for that hole to be filled by Joe Kelly, Henry Owens, Sean O'Sullivan, or anyone else the team has on their list of candidates.

None of those pitchers have the potential to be the 1A to Price's ace status. And moving forward, if the Red Sox want to be serious contenders, that's exactly the type of dominant starter they'll need.

So the bad news is that it doesn't look like Rodriguez will be healthy enough to be that guy. The good news is, Dombrowski is the right man for the job to go find that guy.

And if you were wondering how some of the big-money, disappointing contracts — Pablo Sandoval and Rusney Castillo — will affect the way Dombrowski handles business at the trade deadline, well, don't.

Red Sox president Sam Kennedy said on my podcast last week that those contracts won't prevent them from adding a player who's either under a big contract or is due for a big deal in the winter.

"Yes, contracts do impact your overall budget and your ability to spend," said Kennedy. "But, I can say with certainty, there is not a concern for the 2016 Red Sox, or '17 Red Sox that we are limited or are going to be hamstrung by any one individual move.

"There's a willingness to do what it takes to be competitive in the American League East and in all of Major League Baseball."

Right now, with the most wins in the division and the second-most wins in all of baseball, the Red Sox are indeed competitive.

In order to be a championship-caliber ball club, they'll need some great news coming out of Dombrowski's office before Aug. 1.

It's unknown as to when Eduardo Rodriguez will return to the Red Sox' pitching rotation. GETTY IMAGES

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.

Date: May 17, 2016

To our patients, their families, and the communities we serve:

As part of Steward Health Care System's commitment to patient privacy and the security of patient information, we wanted to make you aware of a recent incident at the American College of Cardiology Foundation (ACCF) that impacted the personal information of 135 patients who received cardiovascular care at St. Elizabeth's Medical Center (SEMC) (133) and Good Samaritan Medical Center (GSMC) (2) before 2011 (when they were part of Caritas Christi Health Care).

WHAT HAPPENED?

Like hundreds of other hospitals around the country, these hospitals participate in nationwide clinical data registries operated by the ACCF as part of the ACCF's National Cardiovascular Data Registry (NCDR) program. The ACCF is a premier national medical society representing 49,000 physicians and other cardiovascular health care providers and dedicated to improving heart health and the quality of cardiovascular care worldwide. The ACCF's NCDR is a group of ten registries of clinical data submitted by health care providers around the country about their patients that is used to measure, benchmark, and improve the quality of cardiovascular care for all. We use the information and analysis we get from NCDR to ensure that all of our cardiovascular patients receive high quality care. In many cases, state health care regulations or rules set by Medicare or other health insurance payers actually require us to submit data to NCDR. More information about the ACCF and NCDR can be found at:

http://www.acc.org/about-acc • http://cvquality.acc.org/NCDR-Home.aspx

On December 10, 2015, representatives of the ACCF discovered that a data table containing the names, Social Security Numbers, and dates of birth of these 135 patients—along with thousands of other patients of other hospitals and health care providers around the country—had mistakenly been copied into software testing and development databases within the ACCF's software environment. Those databases were supposed to contain only fictional patient data (e.g. "Jane Doe," etc.)—not any data about real patients. During the time between when the table was mistakenly copied (2009 or 2010) and when the mistake was first discovered (December 10, 2015), the ACCF has determined that five software and data analytics vendors hired by the ACCF to help it improve its registries had access to the testing and development databases. According to the ACCF's investigation and discussions with those five vendors, only two of the vendors actually accessed the table containing real patient information. One of those two vendors temporarily copied that table from ACCF's server onto the vendor's own computers on December 3, 2015, in order to complete a project for ACCF. The vendors have confirmed to ACCF that none of their employees used or further shared the information contained in the table, and the one vendor whose employees copied the table has confirmed that all copies have since been deleted. The ACCF reports that all five of the vendors have signed contracts with the ACCF requiring the vendors to keep all ACCF information confidential and prohibiting the vendors and their employees from sharing such information with others.

Importantly, there is no indication that any patient's information has been viewed by any unauthorized person beyond a small number of employees at one or more of those five vendors. There is no indication that any of those individuals has misused any patient's information in any way that might cause harm.

STEPS THAT HAVE BEEN TAKEN, AND ARE BEING TAKEN, FOLLOWING THIS INCIDENT

The ACCF has taken several steps to investigate and to reduce the risk that any similar incident ever occurs in the future. Among other things, the ACCF has made sure that all data about real patients—including the table discussed above—has been deleted from its software testing and development databases. The ACCF also has obtained signed statements from its software and data analytics vendors confirming that the only known copy of the table outside of ACCF's own servers has been deleted. Those signed statements also confirm that no one at any of the vendors misused or further spread the information from the table. The ACCF and the hospitals are both further revising our vendor contracts to ensure even more safeguards are applied to confidential patient data going forward.

STEPS YOU CAN TAKE TO ENSURE THAT YOUR DATA IS NOT MISUSED

As previously indicated SEMC and GSMC have no reason to believe that any person has misused, or will misuse, this patient data in way that might be harmful. That said, there are steps any impacted patients can take if they are concerned that their data might be misused—including requesting a security freeze or fraud alert on any bank and/or payment card accounts that they may maintain, and monitoring their credit. More information about these steps is available at:

https://www.identitytheft.gov/Info-Lost-or-Stolen
http://www.mass.gov/ocabr/data-privacy-and-security/identity-theft/surviving-identity-theft.html

In addition to our apology that this unfortunate incident occurred at the ACCF, SEMC and GSMC are offering all impacted patients one year of credit monitoring from Experian at no cost. If you or a family member received cardiovascular care at SEMC or GSMC in or before 2010 and want to put such monitoring in place, please call us at 877.302.4378 at your earliest convenience. We will help you determine whether your, or your family member's, data was involved and, if so, help you get credit monitoring activated if you choose to use it.

Steward Health Care System has the utmost concern for our patients' privacy and takes measures to ensure that those with whom we share confidential information maintain appropriate, responsible safeguards to prevent unauthorized access to that information. Once again, we sincerely apologize for any inconvenience that this incident at ACCF may have caused any of our patients or their families. We and the ACCF take the confidentiality of your information very seriously and will continue to work to ensure that a similar incident does not occur in the future. If you have further questions or concerns, please contact Steward Health Care System's Office of Corporate Compliance & Privacy toll-free at 877.302.4378.

CITATION GIVING NOTICE OF PETITION FOR RESIGNATION OF A GUARDIAN OF AN INCAPACITATED PERSON

Docket No. SU98P0434
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court • Probate and Family Court
In the Interests of: Paul Russell Ross
Of:
RESPONDENT Incapacitated Person/Protected Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Leon P Drysdale of Manchester, NH in the above captioned matter requesting that the court:

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston MA, 02114

Accept the Resignation of the Guardian.

The petition asks the court to make a determination that the Guardian and/or Conservator should be allowed to resign; or should be removed for good cause; or that the Guardianship and/or Conservatorship is no longer necessary and therefore should be terminated. The original petition is on file with the court.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 06/16/2016. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.

Aries A subtle personal change will make a difference to your attitude and ability to get things done. A financial gift or gain is apparent if you are quick to react.

Taurus Express your feelings and make this a special day for you and a loved one. Doing something out of the ordinary or planning a brief trip is encouraged.

Gemini Listen attentively, but don't be too quick to adopt someone else's beliefs. Structure your day to include the changes that will make your life better. Put your needs first.

Cancer Look for something that will improve your surroundings, allowing you to pursue a dream. Expanding your family or opening your doors to friends will improve your life.

Leo Take a step in a direction that promotes a healthy and prosperous life. Engage in events and activities that will encourage positive change in your lifestyle and profession.

Virgo Keep an open mind and be willing to do things differently if it means working alongside people you respect. Romance is highlighted. Plan a short trip or adventure for two.

Libra Don't let unfinished business linger on. The sooner you put your responsibilities behind you, the easier it will be to pursue more enjoyable activities.

Scorpio You'll accomplish plenty if you work from home or engage in something interesting that sparks your imagination. Plan a fun-filled evening and express your feelings and intentions.

Sagittarius Don't give in to someone using persuasive tactics. You are best off sticking close to home and engaging in personal changes that will lead to better health and greater opportunities.

Capricorn Don't worry about the actions of others. Follow the path that will bring you the results you are looking for. Make plans to do something with people who bring you joy.

Aquarius Focus on what you need to accomplish. Taking care of work or responsibilities, or sending out your resume will bring greater benefits than locking horns with friends.

Pisces Move forward with motivation and determination. Refuse to let anyone slow you down with negativity or pressure. Be proud, finish what you start and celebrate. EUGENIA LAST
